

Romsey Mill is a Christian charity that works within Cambridgeshire helping young people achieve their potential. Romsey Mill work in partnership with the Manor Community College to run the Step-up programme, an alternative curriculum course for year ten and elevens, that is no better described than by one of our current students’:

“Step-up is a program that teaches young people to look at a life in a whole different perspective. It teaches you so much and you leave with a lot of qualifications such as first aid, food hygiene, Junior Football Organisers Award, Arts Award, Enterprise Award, Babysitting Award and much, much more. It’s not like any other lesson. Step-up teaches young people in a fun and exciting way but also understandable. It also helps young people express their feelings and keeps people off the the street as they take you on trips which help you see a different side of life.” Amy Tebboth, Step-up student.
